The Prison Policy Initiative produces cutting-edge research to expose the broader harms of mass incarceration, and sparks advocacy campaigns to create a more just society. Our work is a unique combination of research, advocacy, and organizing, and is designed around two goals: achieving real change on specific issues, and building a national consensus around the fact that over-criminalization is hurting our entire society. This year our publications focused on a range of issues including providing the reform movement with the data and analysis it needs to counter jail expansion and stimulate jail reform; explaining how officials at the various levels of government can and cannot use their power to better or worsen the criminal legal system; and exposing how policies that are supposedly intended to benefit incarcerated people often harm them instead. In addition to our research, we provided technical support to advocates in twenty-four states who are fighting for meaningful criminal legal system reforms.
