But in the 1960s and 1970s, colleges went seriously off track. They stopped teaching about our history, our form of government, and our Founding. They stopped teaching about the freedoms and opportunities America has to offer.

The ensuing result was that by the 1980s and 1990s, kids weren't learning this information in middle school or high school. And the textbooks were hopelessly biased against America's Founding principles.

So what were these textbooks – and the teachers dependent on them – teaching?

They were teaching the principles of radical multiculturalism – to apologize for America's mistakes (both real and imagined).

At the same time, they refused to teach what has made our nation so exceptional in history – that it is a beacon of freedom to the world.

Perhaps you have heard of Howard Zinn.

Before his death in 2010, Zinn was a Marxist-inspired historian and author. On college campuses and increasingly in high schools across America, he has long been hailed as a “strong scholarly voice for the powerless.”

Actually, he was an activist historian relentlessly critical of alleged American imperialism, who managed during his lifetime to build an impressive empire devoted to the spread of his radical ideas and Left-wing, revisionist history.

But since his death, his popularity in America's classrooms has soared to new heights. The Wall Street Journal recently reported that Zinn's most influential work, A People's History of the United States, which had an initial print run of just 4,000 in 1980, has jumped over the past decade to 2.2 million total volumes sold:

In Zinn's telling, America is synonymous with brute domination that goes back to Christopher Columbus. “The American system,” he writes in A People's History, is “the most ingenious system of control in world history.” The founding fathers were self-serving elitists defined by “guns and greed.”

... He names villains (capitalists), condemns their misdeeds, and calls for action to redistribute wealth so that, eventually, all of the following material goods will be “free – to everyone: food, housing, health care, education, transportation.” The study of history, Zinn taught, demands this sort of social justice.

It's not just Zinn.

In fact, far too often, we find influential voices in academia denouncing genuine patriotism and love of country as vices.

Practically speaking, this means an Ashbrook teacher has deep knowledge about core American documents, and therefore does not rely on textbooks for his or her class lessons.

And that's vitally important. An Ashbrook teacher believes that teaching American history has a moral purpose. Relying on textbooks would undermine his or her ability to fulfill that purpose.

In other words, Ashbrook is actively empowering tens of thousands of educators, tapping into their life-long love of learning, to teach their students – America's young people, the next generation of leaders – what it means to be an American.

Today, through your financial support, and with the next school year set to begin only a few weeks from today, you and I have a uniquely promising opportunity to reach even more young people with our conservative, pro-American ideas and values than ever before.

To educate these students about why America, as founded, is the greatest nation on Earth and worth preserving as our Founders envisioned.

Together, we can even have a considerable impact on the civic and history lessons the next generation receives before the general election in 2016.

After all, the Left knows how important it is to control America's classrooms.

Paul Samuelson, the hardcore Keynesian economist and author of the best-selling textbook – of any kind – of all time, famously said:

"I don't care who writes a nation's laws, or crafts its treatises, if I can write its economics textbooks."

Why did he say that? Because he knew that he could mold tomorrow's leaders – and the citizens who vote for them – by controlling what they learn in high school and college.

As is now so disturbingly clear, he was right! By writing the textbooks, he was ultimately co-writing the laws.

It's not just economics. Over the course of the past 30-plus years, students in America's classrooms have increasingly failed to learn American history and the truth about our Founding and America's core values.

Students used to learn American history. They learned about the Founding Fathers and the Declaration of Independence.

They learned about the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. They learned about the branches of the federal government and why it was created that way ... to limit the power of factions and ensure the freedoms of our people.

country in executing a powerful, proven, and aggressive strategy to win the hearts and minds of our young people.

In fact, this strategy has already enabled the Ashbrook Center to effectively reach and strongly influence so many more teachers and students than the Left-wing educational establishment would have ever thought possible. To date ...

... more than 10,000 teachers have taken part in Ashbrook education programs (either online or in person).

... at least 40,000 teachers are using Ashbrook educational materials in their classrooms every month.

... and through these teachers, we are educating more than 2 million students each and every year!

For more than 30 years now, Ashbrook has worked to reinvigorate the study of the American principles of self-government and fight back against the threat of radical anti-Americanism and cultural relativism in our country's classrooms.

You've hopefully already read the encouraging words in the included letter from my friend Ed Meese. I am very grateful for his continued support and endorsement.

And National Review columnist and best-selling author Jonah Goldberg says:

"The Ashbrook Center is one of the under-sung gems in American education."

As I will detail for you below, in recent years we have had a major breakthrough in developing a proven strategy for efficiently reaching the hearts and minds of America's young people with our proudly pro-American and conservative principles.

In short, the Ashbrook Center's strategy successfully equips a new generation of teachers with the tools and knowledge they need to educate our country's future leaders about American history and the Constitution.

And with so many mediocre textbooks in use, it is vitally important we equip these teachers to get along without them – to be able to go to the sources themselves. We equip them to become Ashbrook teachers.

What is an Ashbrook teacher?

It's more than just a mark on their résumés.

An Ashbrook teacher is especially equipped to use primary documents as an indispensable path to a deeper understanding of American history and government. Even more, to affirm the great principles of freedom and equality under the law – essential values of what it means to be an American.

Roger L. Beckett, Executive Director

August 3, 2015

Honorable and Mrs. George Allen
4296 Neitzey Pl
Alexandria, VA 22309

Dear Honorable and Mrs. Allen,

I've heard Ronald Reagan called many things, but never a "pessimist."

But that is exactly what he is called in a leading textbook in use on college campuses today.

That's not all.

The textbook, Introduction to Social Work & Social Welfare: Critical Thinking Perspectives, also rehashes the tired leftist tripe about Reagan being a "sexist" who also "discounted the importance of racism and discrimination." Conservatives in general are blamed for hiking poverty rates since the Reagan years.

Believe me, this example is just the tip of the iceberg for the type of anti-conservative indoctrination going on not just in our colleges, but in high school textbooks as well.

Honorable and Mrs. Allen, I think it is high time we take our country back – starting with our schools!

Make no mistake – we are engaged in a battle for the heart and soul of our nation. As Ronald Reagan put it in his seminal speech, "A Time for Choosing":

"You and I have a rendezvous with destiny. We will preserve for our children this, the last best hope of man on Earth, or we will sentence them to take the first step into a thousand years of darkness."

My name is Roger Beckett, and I'm the Executive Director of the Ashbrook Center at Ashland University in Ohio.

That's right: Ashbrook reaches out to America from the nation's heartland, not from the turmoil of Washington, D.C. We simply refuse to be overrun by the distractions of the nation's capital. Instead, our attention is on righting a ship that is currently capsizing.

Today, I ask you to join me and thousands of other leaders from across the
