Education:A) MAA continued to build a food movement by informing and further educating millions each month via social media, live online events, and campaigns. Moms Across America (MAA) reached an average of 1 million a month on Facebook and other social media platforms.B) We initiated several new campaigns and promoted the campaigns of dozens of other organizations with petitions and other means to reach millions with information that transformed their understanding of the food supply and introduced them to opportunities for better health and disease prevention (con Sch O).C) In 2021, MAA’s executive director continued to appear on many radio and podcasts, major TV and news features, including several episodes of her own podcast and weekly recordings of her Moms Connect meetings. Our executive director also wrote articles that appear in large web and print properties. We are passionate pioneers of organics, influencers in our neighborhoods, and leaders in our communities.D) MAA wrote and shared over 30 articles in 2021 on topics ranging from adulterated baby food to the revocation of the license for glyphosate. MAA articles have been viewed by over 200,000 visitors in 2021.E) Our Action and Toxin Free Town Campaign pages have been viewed thousands of times in 2021, supporting moms and citizens across the country to be successful in having recorded many new locations that restrict on ban glyphosate on school grounds, parks, towns, and countries. These bans mean hundreds of thousands of pounds of glyphosate herbicides will not be polluting our water and communities.F) MAA continued to shape our narrative by creating relationships and collaborating with other organizations in 2021 to leverage our efforts for the greatest impact.G) MAA continued to use a specialized advocacy tool that allowed for 8 campaigns that allowed participants to directly reach decision-makers on topics ranging from adulterated baby food to the revocation of the license for glyphosate.H) We launched the Future Moms Resource page, inspired and instigated by a team of dedicated volunteer Moms, to support new moms and Mom-to-Be when they visit our website. The resources are abundant and holistic in their perspective, something many of our supporters would be proud to share with their sister or best friend.I) We have always been focused on getting Roundup off the shelves in local stores. This year Bayer announced just that. Although it won’t be until 2023, chemical companies will see that their deceptive tactics to continue selling poison must be readjusted or retired to stay in business. The selling of their airport hangar, the closing of manufacturing units, and the continued loss of lawsuits remind us of how important our work has been in speaking up, raising awareness, and holding corporations to account.J) Our friends at Children’s Health Defense won their lawsuit against the FCC for safer wireless radiation regulation. With our partnership in promoting the excellent TechSafeSchools program, education technology directors can adjust wireless router power and reduce radiation exposure to students. Speaking up about exposure to wireless radiation and its hazards continues to be an essential focus of our work. As a result, safer, faster, and more secure fiber optics technology is increasingly becoming the go-to for cities and technology experts.K) In 2021, Moms Across America continued to collaborate with Green Coop Japan members. We added more extensive collaboration with Japanese mom-based groups such as Global Truthers, Mama Angels of Japan, and Organic Food for Schools of Japan. Zen coached leaders in every prefecture of Japan to get organic food in schools. One of those results was releasing the new movie People Protecting Food featuring the former Minister of Agriculture of Japan, Masahiko Yamada. This extremely well-executed Japanese film focuses on the recent raising of the MRLs of glyphosate on the food supply, lack of safety, and health risks. Zen supported this film by not only appearing in it and sharing her family’s story but also connecting and coordinating interviews with several notable Americans.

Health Solutions:Seen as a trustworthy source of information, MAA in response to over 1,000 supporter requests, and with expert advice and after careful deliberation, offers through the MAA website, carefully selected and vetted health solution products proven to support health. MAA only considers those products that come highly advised, tested, and have many testimonials from mothers. Providing this public service has been an honor and responsibility MAA does not take lightly. Altogether, we had about 1,000 people buy products from us in 2021.
